Can Micro-volunteering Help in Africa?

Laurie BUTGEREIT\textsuperscript{1,2}, Reinhardt A. BOTHA\textsuperscript{2}
\textsuperscript{1}Meraka Institute, CSIR, Pretoria, South Africa
\textsuperscript{2}Nelson Mandela Metropolitan University, Port Elizabeth, South Africa

Email: lbutgereit@meraka.org.za
Email: ReinhardtA.Botha@nmmu.ac.za

Abstract

Micro-volunteering has been defined as convenient, bite-sized, crowd-sourced, and network-managed. Micro-volunteers donate their time and energy for organisations which they may not have previously encountered (crowd-sourced), at a time which is convenient to the micro-volunteer, and in small pieces of time (bite-sized). This paper looks at a micro-volunteering project where participants can volunteer for five to ten minutes at a time using a smart phone and assist pupils with their mathematics homework.